Current Comment

There is nothing that starts a cyclone in my gastric region so much as poltroonery in the face of conditions which call for a little human sympathy rather than a Horatio Alger display of bravery. I refer to that maudlin San Jose incident in which one of our American housewives revealed her quick presence of mind by causing the arrest of a man whom she found washing her car partially to compensate for having spent the night in her garage, and partially to earn himself a little breakfast.

It reminds me of the story of the man who fired three shots into some one whom he found sleeping on his front porch, afterwards to discover the fellow had been dead for hours.

To reduce a tragedy to slap-stick comedy is in execrable taste; but to make a whimsically humorous incident into a crude melodrama is the most brutal kind of philistinism.

That one of our higher institutions has deigned to descend from the high pedestal of the "Honor System" is one of the most widely discussed pieces of news among local youths now being exposed to their four years of collegitis. That the "Honor System" has ever been connected with student honor at all is somewhat astonishing. The "Honor System" allowed students to come and go as they pleased during examinations and the professor was compelled to leave the room during that time. Whether or not a student cheated was left to fellow students in the room. A truly silly system! The premise upon which it was based assumed the student to have an "honor" which, according to reliable information, is very questionable indeed.

My informant tells me that cheating during examinations at Stanford and other universities is a rare occurrence owing to the fact that the students so distrust one another that they never know but what their best friend might surreptitiously report them. Then too, if one is so much as suspected of receiving information from an "unpermitted source," a loud hissing takes place all over the room. Such barbarisms are far from being the culture for which a university supposedly strives.

"Furthermore," asserts my collegiate friend, "a week about Palo Alto theaters, Stanford lecture rooms, and the visitor will realize that Stanford is filled with an amazingly large number of "ruffs" —ignorant and uncouth fellows whose mystical capabilities for staying in a university such as Stanford are downright amazing."

"The answer may be found," continued my student friend, "if we ignore the 'Honor System.' S everal thousand dollars, it is estimated, are spent annually by students to get term papers written and examinations passed by other students whose knowledge of the subject exceeds their own, and whose monetary supply is sufficiently low to dispose of any qualms of 'honor' that they may have in doing such work."

The University of California has replaced the 'Honor System" with the naively termed "Honest System." It is called the "Honest System" because it is based on the premise that the only honesty existing in college is a compulsory one. (This is another generalization, but much more reliable than the one previously postulated.) Professors remain in the room during examinations and the student is permitted to bring nothing but writing materials to class. In other words, we are getting back to the old school, that of standing over examinees with a club in one hand and an explusion decree in the other. The name "Honest System" is decidedly ironic.

But is either system the correct one? I think not. The root of this evil, like most evils, is much deeper than the mere scrambling of students to get grades by either foul or fair means. The popular estimation of a college education is all wrong. Today it is almost necessary for all young people to have the pink-ribboned sheepskin. If they flunk out of one university they go to another until they get it. There is always a university that will take them in order to get hold of their tuition fees. In short, it would be well for the larger percentage of our youth to pay out the sum total of four years' tuition in a lump sum and receive their diplomas for it and spend the four years in constructive practical labor. Those who want to go to college and learn can do so while the others can take their diplomas and "scram." The results would be the same.

The same applies in a less practical way to honesty in passing examinations. Let those who want to cheat go ahead and do so. Their parents have paid their tuition and deserve some return. The student pays nothing, learns nothing, and gets nothing, and is the only loser. The student who wants to learn, learns. He does not cheat because to him cheating is of no value. He learns what he wants to learn and comes out with a definite gain. The argument that the student who cheats is robbing the student who doesn't, is a silly one. Learning is a strictly personal matter, and its rewards too, are personal. The student who does not learn can never set himself up as a rival of the student who does.

Service Club Holds Annual All Work Day

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy presided over the charming "print and gingham" luncheon held in the Methodist church last Wednesday in connection with the annual work-a-day session of the Women's Service club.

The members were placed at a nicely appointed table of green and white, decorated with lovely spring flowers from the garden of Mrs. William Lloyd. A delicious, informal luncheon was served.

Following was a business meeting at which reports were heard from the standing committees, Mrs. Kennedy directing from the chair. After voting to sponsor a food sale at the Campbell market on April 14, Mrs. Lloyd and Mrs. C. T. Tanner were appointed by the president to take charge of the affair. An invitation from C. G. Lambert of Redwood City to unite in a sunrise service at Emerald Lake on Easter morning was read by Mrs. R. E. Stubbe, and due to obtrusive circumstances, it was decided to instruct the secretary in a refusal.

The next meeting of the club will be held in the home of Mrs. C. E. York of El Quito road, Wednesday, April 18.

Local 130 lb. Team Feted by Lears' Dinner Party

Members of the championship 130-pound basketball team of Campbell high school were entertained at dinner and an informal reception last Tuesday evening, March 20, by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lear of Santa Clara.

After the dinner each member of the team gave a short talk expressing his gratitude to Coach R. E. Noddin for his careful, able guidance of the team in its quest for the championship trophy. Mr. Noddin then gave a resume of the team's activity during the season, expressing with numerous whimsical touches his hopes and fears for the team's success during the season.

The remainder of the evening was spent in singing popular songs and playing games. Members of the team characterized the reception as a very gay and altogether enjoyable evening of entertainment.

Present were Coach Ralph Noddin, Manager Manuel Ventro; Yell Leader Bob Burrow, and members of the team as follows: Albert Frank, Tony Pisano, Frank Lovoi, Gordon Stafford, Homer Hyde, Vincent Tedesco, Jerry Condensa, Reynold Keesling, Joe Bloom, Gene Lear, John Marlay and Bob Mattusch; hostesses, Mrs. Lear and Mrs. Stewart.

Mrs. P. Alexander To Speak Before Woman's Club

Mrs. Paul Alexander of Redwood City, formerly of Los Gatos, will be guest speaker next Monday, April 2, at the meeting of the Country Woman's club. Her subject is one of vital importance to women: "Making and Probating of Wills, and Community Property Laws."

Mrs. Alexander is fully competent to present this matter, and has presented this paper before numerous clubs. The program will begin at 3 o'clock and guests are cordially invited.

The committee designated for the afternoon includes Mrs. Rose Hanger, Mrs. A. B. Townsend and Mrs. Emily Duncan.

Congregational Concert Planned

A concert will be held in the Congregational church on Saturday evening, April 14, by the Pacific Junior Concert orchestra. This concert is sponsored by Group No. 1 of the guild, and a silver offering will be taken.

This group of young people have performed over radio station KQW and have been very well received.

During the evening home made candies will be sold.

The public is cordially invited.

"Uncle Joe's" Birthday

A dinner and reception was held last Monday evening in honor of Joseph Bohnett on his 86th birthday. After the dinner, which took place at Mr. Bohnett's home and at which members of the family were present, many friends and neighbors called to wish "Uncle Joe" felicitations of the day.

C. OF C. MOVES TO INVESTIGATE PROPOSED WATER CONSERVATION PROJECT; FARLEY IN CHARGE

At a meeting which finished up the business of the fiscal year 1933-34, the Campbell chamber of commerce decided last Monday night to appoint a special committee to report on the proposed water conservation project which recently received a conditional monetary grant from the federal government.

Guy E. Farley was appointed chairman of the committee by the newly elected president, Harry C. Smith. He will announce the complete personnel of that body at a later date.

The purpose of the committee is to investigate charges made by T. J. Henderson and S. N. Hedegard that the project is inadequate and unsound as far as the people on this side of the valley are concerned, since the greater benefits to be derived would fall to the residents of the east side of Monterey road.

"After we have heard the report of the committee," declared Mr. Smith, "we will simply discharge one of our many public duties and services—we will attempt to educate the people of this vicinity in respect to the course which it is in their own best interests to follow in the general election. It is absolutely imperative that the people of this community know the precise and ultimate value of the water conservation plan in order that they may vote intelligently when the question of floating bonds is rendered to them in that election. We will do all in our power to make the issue clear."

Dan Yeager, secretary-treasurer, reported a surplus of $40 for the fiscal year, most of it resulting from the very successful Old Settlers' day show which was sponsored jointly by the chamber of commerce and the local Kiwanians in February.

Herbert M. Shadle, retiring president of the organization, turned over the gavel to Harry Smith. Other officers selected at the recent election were: S. N. Hedegard, vice president; Dan Yeager, secretary-treasurer (incumbent); Hans E. Hansen, Guy E. Farley, Ira A. Abbott, Dr. W. I. Merrill and Herbert M. Shadle, members of the board of directors.

Permanent committees appointed by President Smith were: S. N. Hedegard, highways; C. H. Whitman, improvements; R. H. Knappen, publicity; Dr. W. I. Merrill, health and welfare; Mrs. Mary Lanphear, membership; Dr. F. R. Anderson, finance, and H. M. Shadle, police.

Two other actions taken by the Chamber of Commerce were relative to a proposed addition to the Campbell fire district and the danger to shoppers created by children who persist in racing up and dawn the sidewalks of the business district on bicycles, scooters, and roller skates. In the first case, Dan Yeager, S. N. Hedegard and Herbert M. Shadle were appointed as a committee to take up the plan with residents of the district which includes the Hedegard tract and immediately adjacent area. In the second, it was agreed to cooperate with all merchants in urging the children to confine their play activity to less congested regions.

Kiwanis Club Receives New Members

Ralph Smith, grocer, and Percy Dunlap, Ford dealer, were received into Kiwanis membership yesterday by Carl Field of the educational committee. President Guy Farley appointed Ralph to the music and club meetings committees, Warren Hyde to the agriculture committee, and Jack Murdock to the vocational guidance committee.

Roy Wheeler, representing California's 100 million dollar business, the state equalization board, told some very interesting facts of this bureau that grew from a small board with little work to an army swamped with duties. He gave information concerning the sales tax, showing its efficacy and results, stating that it was the chief support of the schools of the state.

J. H. Benne.. will be chairman at next week's luncheon, and Norman Pendleton will be the speaker of the day.

St. Patrick In The Saddle at Carboni Dinner Party

A charming dinner party followed by an evening of contract bridge to celebrate the anniversary of the time-honored saint of Erin was given by Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Carboni last Saturday evening at their home on Los Gatos-Santa Clara road. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wendell C. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hartley, San Jose; Mr. and Mrs. George Burrow, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Parsons, Mrs. Emma S. Dalvit, Mrs. Laura S. Allen, Miss Anne Schulte and Miss Helah Laird.

Christening Rites For Daughter of I. D. Townsend

A christening ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving D. Townsend was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Townsend's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. McNair of San Jose. The child was christened March Leigh by her great grandfather, the Rev. J. Moser, who also officiated at the marriage of the baby's parents.

Members of the family and guests present included Mr. and Mrs. John Moser of Saratoga, Mr. and Mrs. Harless Moser and daughters Marion, Ruth and Virginia of Cupertino; Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Townsend and Harold and Ruth Townsend of Campbell; Roderick Hinman of San Francisco, and George Lamphere of Saratoga.

Dainty refreshments in keeping with the pink and white rosebud decorations were served.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

SUGAR BEET QUESTION

Ranking as the second largest beet producing state in the nation, California has millions of dollars at stake on the outcome of the fight now underway in Congress over proposed curtailment of sugar beet production in the United States

The bill now pending, which provides for drastic reduction of the domestic sugar beet quota and corresponding increases in the quotas of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, would seriously cripple the California beet industry—causing heavy losses to one of the healthiest branches of California agriculture.

And it would have the added effect of injuring many other branches of agriculture by forcing the land now being used for beet production into other crops already badly over-produced.

But the most serious aspect of the Jones-Costigan sugar bill, which was submitted to congress at the instance of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, is that the bill itself —and the arguments which have been raised in defense of it—both seemingly point to a new agricultural policy approximating the old free trade doctrine.

Secretary Wallace, for example, has characterized the beet sugar industry as "an inefficient industry." Translated, his characterization means that Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, due to a "cheap labor supply," can produce beet sugar at lower costs than California growers, who employ American workingmen and pay American wage scales.

No one will challenge the truth of his statement.

But if his reasoning is carried to its natural conclusion, it means, inevitably, that California farmers (and American farmers generally) must either go out of business, when they come into competition with cheap labor, or that American living standards must be reduced to a parity with standards in the tropics.

The Jones-Costigan bill, in addition to threatening the welfare of the beet sugar industry, hits at the heart of the whole tariff question. If successful, it would provide a precedent for similar action affecting many other industries.

Many of California's most profitable crops—lemons, almonds, walnuts, beans, butter, eggs, meat and wool for example—would be threatened if the policy involved in the sugar bill was followed. For each of these products, without doubt, could be produced at lower costs in the semi-tropic zone, with its cheap labor supply.

The elimination of these specialty crops would force the bulk of California's agricultural acreage into the production of staple products now produced in over-supply in the middle west. And one result of such a shift would be the defeat of the very surplus control program which the government has set up in an attempt to expedite farm recovery.

If Secretary Wallace, in his newly-inaugurated policy as reflected in the sugar bill, is planning to put the United States on a Free Trade basis, the government should so state, frankly and honestly, so that American farmers wil be under no illusions.

The fundamental question would then present itself: Will we reduce living standards or quit the business?

Certain it is that California, with its many specialty crops, could not compete with semi-tropic countries without tariff protection. And the fact that Wall street happens to have a large investment in sugar plantations in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines certainly does not justify the crippling of an American industry.

Grange In Fight Against League

Members of the California State Grange this week added the weight of their influence to the movement to show Congress that the American people desire their country to be kept free of foreign entanglements.

In Sacramento, Mark Hunt, deputy state master of the Grange, gave his unqualified endorsement to the move to "keep our country out of foreign conflicts and complications, and keep foreign conflicts and complications out of our country."

Hunt, speaking in the absence of George Sehlmeyer, now in Washington, D. C., said:

"It has always been my belief that America should steer clear of foreign entanglements. Through participation in the World Court, the United States would have nothing to gain and everything to lose."

Farm Incomes Increase Fifty-Five Per Cent

In a report issued this week by Chester C. Davis, agricultural adjustment administrator, to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, he says:

"Total farm income from crops in 1933, including rental and benefit payments, is estimated to have been $3,271,000,000, as compared with $2,113,000,000 in 1932, an increase of nearly 55 per cent.

"Part of this recovery was undoubtedly due to the adjustment program getting under way. With livestock and livestock products, the production of which for market covers a longer period, it is not possible to make adjustments so rapidly. It should be added that the full results of a number of important projects launched in 1933 have not yet been felt. It is expected they will become increasingly evident during 1934.'"

Removal of the prospective 40,000,000 acres of land from cultivation, he said, "raises puzzling questions as to regional and commodity competition, rotation, replacement crops, use of labor and the like."

Corralitos Grange To Hold Picnic At Uvas Dam Park

An event of more than usual interest to the people of this section of the state is scheduled for Sunday, April 15, on which date the Corralitos Grange will hold its annual picnic and barbecue at Uvas Dam park. Uvas Dam park is located about nine miles west of Gilroy and is an ideal spot for an affair of this kind as it comprises several acres of picnic grounds, hundreds of tables, a swimming pool, dance platform, etc.

The committee in charge is making extensive preparations to feed and entertain a capacity crowd. The refreshment committee has engaged experts to handle the barbecue and the public may be assured that this part of the program will be taken care of in a highly satisfactory manner.

The entertainment committee is planning a number of novel stunts and entertainment features and the Salinas rodeo committee is planning to bring entertainers from their city. The dance will be under the management of a very capable orchestra. The sports committee has an ambitious program consisting of baseball games, juvenile races, sack races, ladies' rolling pin throwing contest and horseshoe pitching contest. Suitable prizes will be awarded to the winners in all contests. The public is cordially invited to attend.

ROALD AMUNDSEN

Following his return from that voyage iof discovery which proved the truth of the ancient belief of a northwest passage, Amundsen performed other feats equally as great and his adventures in discovering the South Pole as well as the flight over the North Pole have made history. But the first adventure is the one by which the world became familiar with the name, Roald Amundsen.

The equipment and supplies which the little ship Gjoa carried that day in 1903 when she sailed from the quay of Christiania, showed the thoroughness with which all of Amundsen's trips were planned. Although it was over three years later that the staunch Gjoa finally came to anchor off Nome, Alaska, she still carried sufficient supplies for many more months.

Since most of the voyage was over unknown water, treacherous with ice and hidden reefs. it is remarkable that they came through at all. Other ships had been torn to splinters and whole crews had perished attempting the same thing. Several times they ran aground and once in a terrible hurricane they were tempted to abandon ship, and it was only after throwing overboard much of their valuable cargo that they were able to save themselves.

Progress could be made only during the short summer months when the ice became broken up or thin enough for the boat to break through. During the long winter, while temperatures ranged between 60 and 79 degrees below zero, they made several trips inland and along the coast, making valuable discoveries and recording the results of scientific tests. In August, 1906, they arrived at Nome and were given a welcome which precluded the recognition of the world for the voyage which will rank forever among the most glorious annals of the sea.

Can The World Be Recovered?

Will be the subject Judge Rutherford will deliver by electrical transcription at the Campbell hotel on April 2 at 7:45 P. M. This is the surprise night we have been telling you about. Be sure and come and bring your friends; also the booklet you have received, "Dividing the Peoples," as we well know all the efforts of men to pull the world out of the present perplexity and distress have failed and will continue to fail because there is but one sure and complete remedy which will be told you next Monday evening.
